

Law and Ethics: Updates for Clinicians

Training Description

This course will review recent and planned changes to California and federal law for mental health professionals. We will discuss new rules for Good Faith Estimates and Emotional Support Animal letters to major changes in supervision rules. Additional meaningful changes around technology and continuing education are on the horizon, and clinicians who are fully aware of, and adapt to, these changes can reduce risk to their practices, their clients, and their supervisees. We will also discuss the impact of increased workloads and changes in client expectations on the realities of day-to-day practice. We'll talk about some of the challenges that arise when working with children and families in the modern context, including the impacts of technology on treatment and on family relationships. We'll examine some of the most common causes for licensing board disciplinary actions, including some recent cases that may surprise you. And we'll debate current ethical questions in the field, including the roles of self-disclosure and self-care in clinical practice.

Learning Objectives

Participants will be able to:

- Identify four recent changes in relevant state law for California mental health providers.
- Identify at least two recent changes in relevant state regulation for California mental health providers.
- List three requirements under federal law for mental health providers.
- Describe three common causes for professional disciplinary actions.
- Describe at least two ethical concerns surrounding app-based psychotherapy.
- Connect at least one form of self-care with ethical compliance.
